The country has Mr. Laidley's assertion about the st year and this as proof that the have substantially eliminated the financial phase of it.

Mr. Laidlev cannot expect us to go over he familiar ground, so often gone over, that he or some other Greenbacker may reassert their well worn statements about the use of metallic moneyand about the necessity for the Government monopolizing the issue of paper money. What light does he throw to-day on one single point touched? Why does he say that the country has only one dollar of money for ten dollars that are needed? We say that such a statement is absurd on its face. A country that is known to have hearded away at least $200,000,000 of gold in the last three years is pretty well supplied with the means of exchanging its commodities.

It was that immense reserve of coin that restablished her solvency and her prosperity. Nothing else could have done it.

Mr. Laidley can find no warrant for his financial theories in regard to the substitution of paper for metallic money in the history of any civilized country. We can quote the example of all really prosperous nations in refutation of such theories. For instance, Great Britain has three times as much, and Germany more than twice as much, and Germany more than the cashier, who find not warrant for his finance, Great Britain has three times as much, and Germany more than twice as much, and Germany more than the cashier, who find not warrant for his lands of the Mechanics National Bank. But all the world knows that but for our extraordinary crops and the great market abroad for them, we could not have given our paper money a specie value.

So impressed were the framers of the Coastitution of the United States as to the dangers attending the issue of paper money and the greatment attacks. The United States is to the dangers attending the issue of paper money and the greatment attacks. The supposed instances are freely named, but it would of course be unjust to give publicity to the names at the present time, when nothing is positively known. The defaulting cashier has long been both esteemed and liked in Newark, and his fellows in office in other Newark banks seem to be as much grieved as surprised. This is saying much since the surprise is simply boundless. As one prominent clizen remarked, "He would as soon have thought of one of one of the churches turning over and standing on top of its spire." While Baldwin was making the statement to the directors on Sunday, confessing his own guilt, the bells in the Trinity Episcopal Church, of which he was a member and to which he had subscribed liberally, were calling the laithful to worship. He will have to negotiate and manœuver dexterously to carry out his economic schemes. It is not believed that Bismarck will try to conciliate the clericals by granting concessions in regard to the Cultunkampt. It is therefore prophesied as a broad result of the elections that he must either frankly return to what his opponents call a liberal policy, or bring his opponents call a liberal policy, or bring about a complete stand-still in domestic

The Prospects of Liberal Success and Washington, October 31.—Colonel Cam-eron, the Liberal candidate for Governor presses the fullest confidence in the success of the Liberal ticket in that State. Since July 4 Col. Cameron has been actively engaged in the canvass, and has addre meetings in every legislative district. Wherever he went the Liberal candidate met with enthusiastic receptions. The large attendance at the meetings show that the people are fully aroused to the importance of the pending struggle, and that their sympathies are largely with the Liberal sympathies are largely with the Liberalmovement.

Colonel Cameron said to-night that wherever he went he saw unmistakable evidence of the progress of the Liberal cause among the white people.
In every county many leading white men, who heretofore have acted with the Bourbons, have declared for the ilberal ticket, and some of them are taking an active part in the campaign. Last year in the same counties the whites were most all the same counties the whites were most at-arrayed on the Bourbon side, and the only arrayed the Democratic ticket wores cast against the Democratic ticket were cast by colored men. A great change has taken place in these counties, and the indications are that with the aid of the colored vote a number of them will give a majority to the Liberal ticket.

The great encouraging feature of the campaign at this time is the division that exists among the whites. Col. Cameron, Gen. Mahone, Col. Brady, and other Liberals and the campaign, believe the Liberals will poll at least 00,000 white votes, which is nearly half of the aggregate white vote that will be cast November 8, including the white Republicans. It is estimated that the colored vote will reach about 65,000, of which not more than five per cent will be induced to vote the Bourbon ticket.

The aggregate vote polled for the Garrield and Hancock electors was 212,000. It is believed that the vote next week will be as large as that last year, and on this basis the Liberal leaders are confident that the reform ticket will receive from 115,000 to 120,000 votes, which would give that ticket a majority ranging from 20,000 to 28,000. The extent of their majority is regarded by the Liberals as a question of their ability to qualify colored voters by the payment of their poll tax, one dollar per capifa. The colored men are united and enthusiastic for the Cameron ticket, and large numbers are paying their own poll tax, an evidence of the earnestness of their feeling, and of the special therest taken in the contest.

Of the success of the Liberal legislative ticket in Virginia there is not the alightest doubt, and the Bourbons reluctantly concede that the Liberals will secure a good working majority in both branches of the Senate of forty. Of the latter nineteen hold over, and of these thirteen are Liberals and fifty-six members of the Liberals had fifty-six members of the Honse of Delegates consists of 100 members and the Senate of forty.
